MISCELLANEOUS READING.

A ROUGH COUNTRY.

The present session of the Missouri State Legislature has been remarkable for the witty speeches of its members. On Monday evening again, Mr. White, of the House, de livered himself as follows, in reference to the project of forming a new county :

I predicate my objections to this new county on different grounds, one of the main and most important of which is, that I am confident it would not be entitled to a representative in the next fifty years. Mr. Speaker, did you ever visit the territory sought to be created into the county of Carter? Did you ever have an opportunity of beholding its multifarious beauties and of examining its boundless resources ? Well, sir, I have. I have been all over it, and all around it and I do say here openly, and defiantly, that there is not level ground enough within its entire limits to build a pig-pen on. (Laughter) The soil is so poor it would not grow 'penny-royal." Sir, 'you might mow the county with a razor and rake it with a fine comb and you would't get enough fodder to keep a sick grasshopper through the winter. (Renewed laughter.) Sir, they plant corn with crow-bars and hold their sheep by the hindlegs while they nibble the grass in the cracks of the cliffs. (Increased laughter.) Sir, the feræ naturæ of that section are prin citally ticks, and I must in justice say, that varity of insects attain a splendid size in this new county of Carter, the smallest that ever fell under my observation being at least as big as saddle-bag locks. (Laughter.) As to internal improvement in that section, this House can form some idea when I assure it that the only thing resembling a road, that I ever saw there, was when one of the bare footed natives dragged a wild boy seven miles through the snow. (Laughter and cheers.) With such a country as this, Mr. Speaker, they propose to make a new county, and the reason given for so doing is, that the convenience of the inhabitants will be promoted thereby! Sir, if it were possible to hold their courts under a shade of post-oak and black-jack saplings, to keep a clerk's office and the records of the county in the recesses of a hollow sycamore, and to make a jail out of some of the dark and slimy caves beneath the craggy hills of that rough country; if it were possible to establish the machinery for doing county business out of such materials, we might entertain the project as feasible and be found. They are not in the county. And as for a sycamore tree suitable for a deposi-tory of the archives of the county, it would be sought in vain. The winds even refuse to blow sycamore pods in that direction. (Cheers and laughter.) And the idea of the people ever being able to build houses, in which to transact business, is deeply, darkly, prodigiously and preposterously absurd.

THE AURORA BOREALIS: WHAT IS IT?

plausible. But, alas, even such advantages as these are denied by nature to this county.

(Great laughter.) It is true, there would be no difficulty about the caverns for a jail, but the necessary post-oak and black-jack saplings, to supply with their foliage a canopy for the august tribunals of justice, could not

In "A Research into the Laws of Force," by Samuel Elliott Coues, published by Little & Brown, Boston, in 1851, the following passage occurs: aurors of the northern repears to be an arch in the circuit of the magnetic force,' spanning a portion of the earth, as if conducting the flow from where it abounds, to where it is needed, without passing through the intermediate parts. shooting cylinders of rays have been compared to the flame which arises in the closed ircuit of the voltatic pile between two points of carbon. Is it not a flame stretching between the surcharged and undercharged parts of the earth or atmosphere? That it is passage of what is called the galvanic fluid we know for it disturbs the magnetic needle, which often points to the corona of the arch. It indicates a disturbed electric condition; and while the lightning in the electrial storm shows a sudden transfer of force, the aurora represents a more gradual adjustment of the equilibrium; in the one a disruptive, in the other a conductive discharge. It does not occur in the night time only, but its path may often be traced by day in a circle of half-illuminated clouds. It is usually accompanied by a high barometric condition of atmosphere, and great tension of vapor; by all the phases of motion which indicate the presence of more than the usual force.-For this reason we consider it a distribution of the magnetism of the polar regions, pass-clear wind from the northwest has begun to diffuse the spare force of the more northerly regions." TIO FARMERS, GARDENERS, &c .- The un dersigned having received the Agency for TASKER & CLARK'S CELEBRATED FERTI LIZERS, respectfully invite the attention of the
